ABOUT THE SHOW:

The Good, The Bad & The Geeky is a podcast that has a few people (mainly Nick Nitro, Jerome Wetzel aka Jimmy and Nathan aka DJ Meat) talk about movies, music, television, video games, comic books and anything else geeky, and maybe occasionally their day to day lives. They also sometimes perform parody songs, and comedy bits and sketches. While the main podcast can go past the PG-13 rating, we keep the sketches PG-13.

The show is usually broken into two segments: The normal “Podcast” section of the show and then the “sketch” side of the show. Sometimes the show could be all one or all the other.

ABOUT THE SKETCHES

Currently (at this time) there are two sketches that we are looking for roles. Some of the roles in said sketches are considered “Legacy” characters, meaning that they are reoccurring or can be reoccurring, while others are guest roles for the month. One sketch is considered 100% original, the other is lovingly borrowing characters from “Rocky & Friends/The Bullwinkle Show” from the 1960’s aka The Adventures of Rocky and Bullwinkle. Due to the possible difficulties from performing Rocky and Bullwinkle live, this may be recording privately and distributed on the podcast feed for free.

The other sketch that is on-going is a straight up parody of classic sci-fi shows/movies, literally it is Doctor Who from Doctor Who meets Doc Brown from Back to the Future in a series we call Why Not Green: Adventures in Space (And Time, Yes the Time is Implied!).

ABOUT THE PERFORMANCE SPACE

We will be setting up the Event Room at Packrat Comics at 6pm, doors open at 6:30pm and our show begins at 7pm.

HOW TO AUDITION

Please record video or audio (either one) and e-mail Nick at goodbadgeeky@gmail.com and be sure to include your name, phone number (and preferred e-mail if the one you use to send is not your preferred e-mail address). Also be sure to verify if you can receive texts via your phone number (and if not, can you provide a cell phone number that is acceptable?).

Please audition for many parts as you like, and make sure your audition is at least 30-60 seconds in length. If you have a few ideas for one character, send them all in. You never know what will work! This isn’t a “you get one stab at it” kinda thing.

Good luck!

ABOUT THIS EPISODE OF WHY NOT GREEN:

The Professor and Doc Green catch sight of a distress signal being sent from a planet that may make people bi-polar. Or it may just made them dead. What is going on? Only Doc Green and The Professor can find out!

PARTS AVAILABLE in WHY NOT GREEN

CAPTAIN GEORGE S. CONWAY – Captain Conway is a man who is drifting aimlessly in space He is desperate for help, and is trying to get to an alien planet that can help him get back home.

CAPTAIN CONWAYS'S SHIP'S COMPUTER – The computer system of Captain Conway's ship. Preferably female, though open for casting. Is a computer, doesn't feature emotion. It tells the Captain or anyone who accesses its systems what is requested of it.

MJ – A female in her mid-twenties, and is a LEGACY character. (She has a reoccurring arc and could continue past that in the future.) MJ stands for Mary Jane. She lives on the planet bPolariaryemotes, and is part of a search party, and is from, time-wise, from the year 2012.

RULING FIGURE 1 – the planet of bPolariaryemotes is a planet run by women. Ruling Figure 1 (as well as Figure 2) are two of the ruling class of this planet. MJ reports to these two ladies. Both are part of a larger council that governs the planet.

Scene for MJ

MJ

I don't know what you're talking about. A distress signal? We are a peaceful village professor. One with all the things needed to survive. And there has been no distress.

THE PROFESSOR

(aside)

Let me be the judge of that.

(back to norm)

Can you take us back to your leader?

MJ

Ugh. Men. You know I can hear you, right?

Well, I-

(quick beat, then)

No.

MJ

The society here does not have a leader, but instead a ruling council.

Just as good!

I don't get it. A council who rules opposed to one leader. The logic is the same if you sorta think of it.

MJ

Not exactly.

Either way, the sooner we can get to the council, the sooner we can find who set that distress signal and be one our way.

MJ

Very well. C'mon. And no funny business. Jerks.

Hrm. Do you perhaps, hurt primates, like myself, when we arrive?

RULING FIGURE 1

Us? Do barbaric acts such as physical harm? Here, we allow no one to be pushed down the stairways.

Or trip in the cleanliness room of bathing and beauty! How dare you accuse us!

THE PROFESSOR

It was merely a question, I am not trying to cast judgement on you, my dear woman. Just merely pointing out that we were drawn here by a distress signal. A sign that alerts us that someone is in, you know, in danger.

And what, are you their savior?

Me? Naw. More like a friendly pal saying "Hello."

RULING FIGURE 2

We do not like your hellos.

We do not like you being 'friendly'.

Enough of this. I rule that we lock both men up.

THE PROFESSOR

On what charge?

RULING FIGURE 2

For being men!

I second this motion!

Another Scene for MJ

MJ

Hm. And this JARVIS... your 'ship'. Is this what you use to travel through time?

GREEN

And space!

MJ

Whatever. Is it what you use to travel through time and space?

NARRATOR

The Professor looks at Doc Green, vexed as MJ looks out the window, and then back at both of them.

MJ

Look. Here's the deal. You take me to your ship... and take me with you.... I'll take you to where you say this distress signal is coming from.

Scene for CAPTAIN CONWAY and COMPUTER

CAPTAIN

Which one is this? I mean, is this planet's atmosphere like the other atmospheres in Allies database?

COMPUTER

Atmopshere reading: Oxygen-based planet with toxicity of 25%.

CAPTAIN

Crud. Computer: Identify toxicity.

COMPUTER

Unknown.

CAPTAIN

Samples from outside the shuttle show nothing conclusive like mercury, carbon dioxide and toxic amounts of nitrogen, argon or potassium. I guess the only thing left for me to do is put my helmet on and see if the atmosphere will allow me to survive. Computer, please keep open communications stored in my Captain's Log.

COMPUTER

Yes, Captain. Open Channel between my programming and Captain George S. Conway.

CAPTAIN

Thanks for that play by play, Computer.

COMPUTER

I do not understand your question or statement.

CAPTAIN

That was sarcasm you big old bucket of bolts.

COMPUTER

I do not understand your question or statement.

CAPTAIN

Sarcasm. Look, are you recording?

COMPUTER

Yes.

ABOUT THIS EPISODE OF THE MAGICALLY UNAUTHENTICATED MISADVENTURES OF ROCKY AND BULLWINKLE:

Picking up right where the movie left off, give or take about 15 years or so, a scientist named REESE URCHER finds a new type of element, only to discover that it may not be that new at all. And only two individuals may know of the true potential. Of course it would be Rocky and Bullwinkle!

Other Important Notes About This Series:

Episode 1 does not introduce Boris Badenov and Natasha Fatale, but we are looking for these characters just in case, same with the OLD MAN role. Please note: If you submit an audition for any of these roles, we MAY ask you to resubmit another audition just in case. Please be aware or be on the lookout for a possible follow-up e-mail.

Also: We may perform two sketches a show, almost as 'a book-end', if you will. In some cases, we may do '3' episodes. This may be a case by case basis. Please be aware of that.

PARTS AVAILABLE in Rocky and Bullwinkle (full title TBD)

Note: Some of the roles below may or may not extend in to future episodes and thus may be considered 'casting early'.

NARRATOR – Quick and fast as lightning, with a higher or baritone register, the Narrator is a vital component to the quick wit and wordplay of any Rocky and Bullwinkle adventure.

ROCKET J. SQUIRREL – usually called by the nickname "Rocky", is the name of the flying squirrel from what is now known as the television classic The Adventures of Rocky and Bullwinkle. He is best friends with Bullwinkle. Since the property's decline though, Rocky has tried to remain positive though sometimes his cracks show. Despite this, the so called brains of "Moose and Squirrel" has the personality of that of an upstanding yet if slightly naive all-American youth (from an earlier time in our case. More like 1950's.)

BORIS BADENOV – A spy for the fictional nation of Pottsylvania who works with his possible love Natasha Fatale. Last seen taking orders from Fearless Leader, Boris is still up to his old tricks.

NATASHA FATALE – A spy for the fictional nation of Pottsylvania who works with her love Boris Badenov. Last seen taking orders from Fearless Leader, Natasha is still helping Boris, who is still up to his old tricks.

REESE URCHER – a scientist who finds a new type of element. Or so he thinks. Other scientists are saying it is really a long lost forgotten ore called "Upsidaisium" but alas, he needs to find Bullwinkle to find out for sure. Smart but not too nerdy and comes off average guy kinda role. Could also be cast as female. Possible Legacy Character as they have multiple episode arc.

SCIENTIST 1 and SCIENTIST 2 – Two scientists that Reese Urcher meets and seeks help from. Very waspy, or british sounding in theory. Male/Female.

OLD MAN – Old man who may be the victim of two no-good no-goodniks.

Scene for ROCKET J SQUIRREL, NARRATOR:

NARRATOR

And then Reese began to tell his tale of how he found Upsidaisum, found in previous episodes of this program. We conclude with Rocky's part of this tale-

ROCKY

But Mt. Flatten was seized by the government back in the day and was mined for all the Upsidaisium before it was obtained by some weird foreign cold war crook.

BULLWINKLE

Yeah!

ROCKY

He was named Mr. Big.

BULLWINKLE

But he was so small!

ROCKY

Mr. Big though tried to steal even a tiniest big and then floated up into space.

BULLWINKLE

Never to be heard from again.

ROCKY

Because he was tiny.

BULLWINKLE

Because he was teeny-tiny! The small bit of Upsidaisum just kept lifting him higher and higher.

ROCKY

And with discussion of adding all those new elements to the Periodic Table in the news-

BULLWINKLE

Reese here feels that it should be added.

Scene for REESE URCHER, NARRATOR, SCIENTIST 1 and SCIENTIST 2

URCHER

That was a close one! What in the world..? I was floating up in the sky because... of my knapsack?! That rock?

NARRATOR

Yes, the rock! When he pulls it out, he lets go as it starts to levitate itself into the air-

URCHER

No way am I letting you go! What is this strange new rock?

NARRATOR

It was a great question! Reese Urcher made sure to grab the rock and climbed back down Mt. Flatten, taking his amazing rock to his home state of New York where other scientists when goo-goo for the new hot find of the century!

SCIENTIST 2

Where did you find this again, old bean?

URCHER

Why, I found it on Mt. Flatten!

SCIENTIST 2

Mt. Flatten. Never heard of it!

URCHER

Everyone will know it soon. It is the place I found my find!

NARRATOR

And what a great one it was, yet, as one scientist pipes up to say:

SCIENTIST

Except this isn't a find at all!

URCHER

Say what now?

SCIENTIST

This isn't some new rock or item.

SCIENTIST 2

Then I say, what is it, old bean?

SCIENTIST

Why this is just a rare form of Upsidasium!

Scene for NARRATOR, BORIS BADENOV, and OLD MAN

NARRATOR

Meanwhile, on the other side of the country, far away from Frostbite Falls, Minnesota... in the small danky town of Tallhuse*, in an old folks home, a short figure, with a pencil thin-mustache begins to wheel himself, and a citizen of the home, forward towards the curb.

* = WORD PRONOUNCIATION: TALL HUSSY

BORIS

Here you go fella.

OLD MAN

What is going on?

BORIS

You is getting one way trip to home.

OLD MAN

I didn't even know I left!

BORIS

You did! Here is your bill.

OLD MAN

Bill? I don't have my glasses. What do I owe you?

BORIS

That'll be all your money please.

OLD MAN

All of it? Oh.kay.

NARRATOR

And the old man gave the figure all the money he had! The figure slinked away, laughing evilly!

BORIS

(laughing)

NARRATOR

That poor old man! You're a no-goodnik if I ever saw one!

BORIS

I wouldn't be a good-goodnik now, would I? Ha ha!

Scene for BORIS BADENOV, NATASHA FATALE and NARRATOR

NARRATOR

Natasha quickly slips out the door and quietly holds up a massive block, er- uh, is that a cell phone?

NATASHA

(to Narrator)

Yes dahling. On our budget, we must make due. Kid today has iPhone or Samsung. Boris and I has old 80's cell phone brick.

(to cell)

Boris dahling, come in, dahling.

BORIS

(muffled on a phone)

Yes Natasha?

NATASHA

Moose and Squirrel are here with putz scientist.

BORIS

(muffled on a phone)

Drat! It took us whole week to get clearance. But Moose and Squirrel not far behind.

NATASHA

Whole week, Boris?

BORIS

(muffled on a phone)

Okay, okay. You right, Poopsie. Washington vetting process take less than five minutes.

NATASHA

How five minutes?

BORIS

(muffled on a phone)

Heh heh. Bribery.

NATASHA

Oh how wonderful, Boris.

BORIS

(muffled on a phone)

What can I say, Washington now is my kind of place. Whole town is crooks.

NATASHA

Okay Boris.

(whispers into phone)

I see General coming into building. Must get back to spying on Moose and Squirrel.
